THE DAY IS SHORT THE WORK IS MUCH

We have always maintained that it is not the job title but the man or woman that makes the job. No matter what the task to be done, it is the effort exerted and the dedication invested that is the bottom line.

We know Doctors and doctors, Rabbis and rabbis, Parents and parents, Children and children. Some are in upper case, in capitals because they have been found worthy by turning in a capital performance; others are in lower case, in tiny letters because they have hardly been a credit to their calling.

In the eighties, we are members of a short-cut generation which is under the mistaken apprehension that one has only to give someone or something a name and he will live up to it: that the name creates the creature. Labels are not taken lightly by those who care: they must be earned through the laborious process of sweat and toil. To be a Jew requires total adherence to a thoroughgoing curriculum of Jewish living; to do less forfeits all rights to the name at all. To be a Talmid Chacham demands a heavy input of time, energy and singleness of purpose; to be an educator-spiritual leader means years of self-negation and sacrifice for the community, the home, the school, the person. The same with a doctor of bodily ailments: years of premedical studies, years of medical courses and more years of internship. One can not become a Master from the book alone or from the Book. There must be shimush—there must be intensive field work, in advance—in preparation—and devoted service afterwards. Yet there are many who expect their learning to be injected into them by hypodermic or to come to them in sweet easy doses and multi-colored pills. They expect to fly before they have learned to walk. They fly or hop, skip and jump to the end of the rainbow, pick up their pot of gold and count their spoils—because the world owes it to them—without a thought for the spiritual and physical condition of the Klal.

Of what value a surgeon, college professor, mechanech, organization head who has his credentials only on the walls of his office and does not service the community?

We recently reread the letter which the great Maimonides, the RAMBAM, sent to Samuel ibn Tibbon, translator of The Guide of the Perplexed, who was eager to meet with him to discuss basic problems of the translation. Maimonides was now on in years, but he outlined a daily routine that required the stamina of a person half his age—if indeed one person could handle it alone. Perhaps he could follow such a schedule because of his unique talents; more probably it was his high motivation for the benefit of the Egyptian Jewish community and his respect for his manifold professions that provided the energies to perform his duties as physician, scholar, rabbi, philosopher, writer, linguist, community leader. Day and night these services were in demand; he was in demand. He had no time to write letters.

"In order to write this to you," Maimonides says, "I have had to escape to a secluded spot where people would not think to find me, sometimes leaning for support against a wall, sometimes lying down on account of my excessive weakness, for I have grown old and feeble. But with respect to your wish to come here to me, I cannot say how greatly your visit would please me for I truly long to commune with you. Yet I must advise you not to expose yourself to the perils of the voyage, for, beyond seeing me and my doing all I could to honor you, you would derive no advantage from your visit. Do not expect to be able to confer with me on any scientific subject for even one hour, day or night, for this is my daily occupation:

"I live at Fostat (Mizr) and the Sultan dwells in Cairo (Kahiro), two Sabbath days' journey away. My duties to the Sultan are quite heavy: I am required to come to him every day, early in the morning. When he or any of his children or members of his harem are indisposed, I dare not leave Cairo but must remain in the palace most of the day. It frequently happens that royal officers fall sick and I must attend to their healing. So, as a rule, I do not return to Mizr until afternoon, almost dead with hunger, to find my antechambers filled with Jews and Gentiles, nobles and common people, judges and bailiffs, friends and foes: a mixed multitude who await the time of my return.

"I dismount from my animal, wash my hands, go forth to my patients and entreat them to bear with me while I partake of some slight refreshment—the only meal I take in the twenty-four hours. Then I proceed to attend to my patients and prescribe for their ailment. They go in and out till nightfall, an sometimes until more than two hours into the night. I converse with the patients, reassure them and prescribe for them while lying down for sheer fatigue and am so exhausted I can scarcely speak. In consequence of this, no Israelite can have any private interview with me except on the Sabbath.

"On the Sabbath, the whole congregation, or at least the majority of the members, come to me after the morning service when I instruct them as to their proceedings during the whole week. We study till noon, when they depart. Some of them return later and read with me between Mincha and the evening prayers. So I spend the Sabbath day. I have here related to you only part of what you would see if you were to visit me . . ."

Such was the daily life of one of the greatest personalities of all time, a professional whose achievements 780 and more years ago are every day a source of greater wonderment to us. He could have worked less, could have relaxed his schedule, could have demanded exorbitant fees . . . but he felt that, even in his old age, his life belonged to his community and he devoted himself entirely to it.

What of his counterparts today? And if this was his schedule late in life, what might it have been earlier, when he was in the prime of life, studying, producing his unpeered works? How many days and nights must he have gone sleepless and hungry to attain the pinnacle?

Learning is an arduous process. Giving of one's self entirely to a calling and proving ourselves worthy is no less arduous. How many of us can do it? How many will do it? How many are devoted enough to our purpose and name?

Words to the Wise

Excerpts from the Words of the Lubavitcher Rebbe shlita

Our Sages say that giving Tzedaka (charity) to the poor, opens the way for our prayers to give us good health, prosperity and happiness. Man possesses a body and a soul, and just as there is material poverty (in food, clothing and shelter) so there is spiritual poverty, where the deficiency is in spiritual things—knowledge of the Torah, observance of the Mitzvos, and the practice of good deeds. How are we to understand the words of the prophet “when you see a poor man—clothe him? Surely also in this sense: When you see a man lacking in the knowledge of the Torah, take him into your house, teach him the Sh'ma, encourage him to fulfill the Mitzvos, teach him Torah, etc.

Although we cannot alter the flow of time, either stretching it or contracting it, this is so only superficially. In reality, each particle of time—not any long period, but even a day, gives us almost infinite possibilities. Therefore, although human life is limited on this earth to a certain number of years, one is not limited in one's possibilities so much, as would take others thousands of years to accomplish.

A Spot of Light

The great rise of the Jewish nation from the abyss of Egypt to the sublime heights of Sinai was attained by pure and simple faith in G-d, from the day when parents and children, women and infants, several million souls in all, set out on the trek through the desert, not dismayed by the irrationality of it all, but simply obeying the Divine call with absolute trust. This won special Divine Favor, in the words of the Prophet: “I remember unto thee the kindness of thy youth, the love of thy betrothal, thy going after me into the wilderness”.

It is this faith that carried the Jews through the ages, an insignificant physical minority in the midst of a hostile world, a spot of light threatened by an overwhelming darkness. It is this absolute faith in G-d that we need nowadays more than ever before.

“LOVE ALL PEOPLE”...

The previous Lubavitcher Rebbe of sainted memory required of his followers that they occupy themselves with befriending even simple, unlettered, and often unobservant Jews. What is more, he expected his Chasidim to teach and instruct these individuals even in such simple matters as “Alef-Beis”; either “Alef-Beis” in the plain sense of the term or the “Alef-Beis” (i.e. first steps) of returning to G-d and observing the Mitzvos. “....DRAW THEM CLOSE TO TORAH (NOT THE TORAH TO THEM)

At a certain Rabbinical conference at which various solutions to the problem of the assimilation of contemporary Jews were discussed, a delegate defended the policy of partial compromise, bringing the Torah ‘down to the level of the people’. He said: “today a fire is burning in the Jewish community—the fire of assimilation. Now, although drinking-water must indeed be pure, surely anything is good enough to extinguish a fire—even dirty and impure water.”

The previous Lubavitcher Rebbe of sainted memory, who was present at the meeting retorted: “That is true if the liquid is definitely water and the only question is whether it is clean water or impure water. If, however, one should seize a bucket of liquid and throw it into a raging fire in an attempt to quench the flames, and if that liquid should prove to be, not water at all, but kerosene...!What then?”

GUARD THE UTTERANCES OF THY TONGUE'

It is common knowledge that our Torah condemns gossipmongering and tale-bearing. Not only is such misuse of our gift of speech condemned in general terms, it is also specifically defined. Breaking these rules is not only unethical; it constitutes a violation of a precise law of our holy Torah.

Rumor-mongering or tale-bearing (r'chilus) consists of relating a person's acts or deeds to a third party, even when no harm is meant.

Doing so with the intention of bringing shame, insult, or damage is slanderous (Lashon harah—evil tongue).

He who listens to slanderous reports is worse than the one who tells them!

There are hints and shades of slander in the following common occurrences: making an insulting remark in jest, even if the person insulted is present; saying, “Let's not talk about so-and-so, the less said about him,

I N T E MARRIAGE

What if it's too Late?

What if it's too late?

The telephone rang.

I was petrified. What if it was Mrs. G. calling to find out whether I had gotten in touch with her son? Her son, of course, is a nice Jewish boy who has joined the Mormon Church. Or maybe, I thought, maybe it was Mr. R. calling to find out if I had reached his daughter yet. His daughter is a nice Jewish girl who resides in a well-known Buddhist monastery in New England. Or maybe it was my own bank, a thought which terrified me to no end.

"I'm calling about my daughter, Rabbi," the voice on the other end said. "She's living with this fella. He's black."

"Is he Jewish?" I asked.

"I don't think so. He doesn't look Jewish. He's from one of the islands, you know, the Bermuda-type islands."

"I see. What kind of background did your daughter have?"

"Oh, Rabbi, she had the best. She was an art major, earned a degree in anthropology, and..."

"I meant Jewish background."

"Oh that...uh...well, she did go to Hebrew School for six years, but we took her out after we moved. But it's not like she lacked a good Jewish education, Rabbi, because we tried very hard, Rabbi, very hard, to imbue her with basic Jewish values as she grew up."

"Mind sharing with me some of those teachings, madam, so I can get a better picture of your daughter's background?"

"Well, in general, we stressed to her that Judaism teaches us to be moral, ethical and loving of all mankind."

"I assume Bermuda islanders are also part of all mankind."

"Certainly, but what does that have to do with it?"

"Well, if Judaism to your daughter is nothing beyond being nice and loving to all of humanity, why not also to a non-Jewish Bermuda islander?"

There was a pause for what seemed to be a long period of time.

You see, if a boy and a girl of opposite faiths fall in love with one another, there really is very little if anything that can be done about it overnight. You cannot combat an emotional issue with intellectual argumentation. Two or three decades ago this may have been possible since the family bonds between chil- dren and parents were that much stronger. If Rachel told mama she was going with a nice boy named McCullough, mama would remove her shoes, rip her sweater and gently ask: "Who should I invite from your friends?" And Rachel would jump with joy: "You mean you'll come to the wedding?" And mama would say: "What wedding? I'm talking about a funeral." The rabbi would then sit Rachel down in his rustic study and leaf through the Book, pointing out to Rachel how the Torah forbade her to marry McCullough: "Thou shalt not marry McCullough." The rabbi would then admonish Rachel with: "How can you dare to cause your mother and father so much anguish by marrying McCullough? Is nothing sacred to you anymore?"

In a great many cases, Rachel gave McCullough the pinkslip and instead went on to marry a Chaim Yankel. But that was yesterday, when children gave a damn about their parent's feelings even when they could not have cared less about their tradition. Today, however, we are through with guilt trips: "So it hurts my parents. So what? I don't mean to hurt them, but it's their choice to hurt. Why should I suffer just because they disagree with my choice of a mate, with my choice of what I want to do with my life?"

In the average case, where the children have already started to share apartments with non-Jews of the opposite sex, in matrimony or other arrangements, it is still not too late. Parents should rise up and rekindle their own Jewish sparks by engaging in a serious and consistent program of Torah study leading toward gradual observance. It is never too late for parents to become the role model they failed to be for their children earlier in life. Sooner or later, the deeds of the parents touch the souls of the children, or grandchildren, eliciting curiosities that have lain dormant for years, self-contemplations that have been concealed beneath layers and layers of ignorance and apathy.

Threatening to disown a child may succeed only in rare cases and in instances when the interdating child is so emotionally attached to the parents that such threats would bear the desired results. But parents take great risks in attempting any action and should consult an experienced rabbi or counselor first. Today, more often than not, children are not into "guilt" and we're all okay, just live and let live. But by maintaining a positive relationship with a child, the chances of reaching them, or at least rescuing future generations of Jews, are much higher.

Nonetheless, parents should not assume this advice as some easy remedy, for it requires an enormous amount of tolerance. Sometimes it will take a year or two before there is some kind of reaction, sometimes three years, sometimes a decade. But in the end there is a beginning of many new generations of Jews who otherwise might not have been.

Does this mean that parents should just "play along" with a pending intermarriage and adopt the convenient attitude of "we'll work it out later?" Not at all. Certainly they should attempt in the best way they know how to prevent the tragedy from happening, but they should worry about this as early in the game as possible and not dismiss it as something that will pass. They should also try to understand why it is happening and therefore avoid giving such cliché advice as: "the marriage won't work because you are of two different religions and such marriages often end up in divorce." Arguments like this don't work anymore, especially since there are unsurpassed numbers of divorces among those who do not intermarry, too. Nor can the "you're hurting your parents" or "you're killing grandma" pleas stem the tide, because we are living in an "I have to do what's best for me" era.

"You know how your father and I feel about John."

"Yes, I do, mom, but I don't understand why. He's really nice."

"Maybe so, but he's not Jewish."

"What's wrong with that? You think only Jews make nice boyfriends?"

"Maybe not, but Jews are not supposed to intermarry."

"Who said so?"

"Our tradition. It is a fundamental Jewish law in the Torah."

"But mom! You and dad never observed anything from the Torah!"

"Huh...well...uh...your dad and I have always attended services on Yom Kippur."

"And where in the Torah does it state that a Jew must attend services on Yom Kippur?" (The End)

A more constructive responsive dialogue would have been as follows:

"You know how your dad and I feel about this."

"Yes, I do, mom, but I don't understand why. He's really nice."

"I don't deny he is nice, but you're a Jew and he's not."

"So what's wrong with that? Only Jews make good boyfriends? Why do we have to be so racist?"

"It's not a matter of racism, dear, if he would become Jewish through a sincere and halakhic conversion, there would be no problem."

"But why must he become Jewish? He's okay just the way he is!"

"We are Jews, dear, and our Torah, which has preserved us as Jews for thousands of years, forbids us to intermarry. It is G-d's word. His commandment to us."

"Oh come now, mother, don't tell me you're suddenly becoming religious. Where was G-d and this Torah all the years I grew up in this house?"

"You're absolutely right, my dear, we haven't given you anything. We neglected to give you a real genuine Jewish upbringing and now we have no grounds upon which to condemn you for what you're doing. What do you know about being Jewish? What did we teach you about it? Nothing. Absolutely nothing. You are right. We are wrong. And it took this to wake us up to our hypocrisy. American Judaism is a big game. Once-a-year temple visitation rights, lip-service to a G-d we leave out on the porch with our umbrellas and galoshes. There may not be much we could say to stop you from what you're doing now, but your dad and I are going to take our Jewishness seriously. I feel bad that it took this to make it happen, and I feel even worse that our neglect was to your loss, but we are now going to study Torah and learn to live by it. You've just taught us what we had never realized before, what no sermon could ever have made us grasp."

"Will you come to the wedding, then?"

"I raised you all these years with no reason why you should not marry someone who isn't Jewish. And while I can therefore not blame you, dear, I can nevertheless not condone that which is wrong for a Jew."

"What if we don't have it in a church? Say a civil ceremony."

"I cannot accept a marriage which has no validity in our tradition. The same Torah which tells me to honor non-Jews as fellow human beings, also tells me I am not to permit my children to marry them. You don't want any more hypocrisy from me, do you?"

"But John's parents will be hurt if you're not there."

"Suddenly you're concerned for parental feelings? Listen, they surely will not be as hurt as we will if we did come. At least they'll have some lively wedding music to console that little pain they may experience by our absence."

There is something more parents can do before their child falls in love with a non-Jewish person of the opposite sex. A great many cases of interdating, interliving together and intermarriage result from meetings on campuses. Parents still possess some control over their children during the college years, at least financially, so why not take firm advantage of this power and set down the law: No Oshkosh. "Thou shalt not choose a college or a university which is distant from a flourishing and heavily populated Jewish community or which is without super-active, success-proven Jewish outreach and learning activities."

"But pop, there are 11,000 Jewish students on campus!"

"Maybe so," pop should reply, "but how committed are they to their Jewishness? If they are predominantly alienated, what positive influence will they have on you? If they'll introduce you to non-Jewish dates, what significance is there in their number?"

Indeed, the National Opinion Research Center at the University of Chicago reports that of the 35,000 graduates polled from 135 colleges, 13% of the Jewish students reported no religious identity whatsoever, and a whopping 60% admitted to practicing very little or nothing at all. So lay down the law while you still have some control. No Oshkosh, make sure there is a vibrant, exciting, active young Jewish community both on and off campus. We cannot play games anymore.

And don't let the "Y" or the local Jewish Community Center fool you either. There are a number of them which conduct singles mixers attended by both Jews and non-Jews. They may tell you how they must invite everyone because they are funded partially by government grants and cannot discriminate, which is all valid and law-abiding. But while the "Y" or the Center may not be in a position to discriminate, Jewish parents are and must. Check out the "Y" or Center carefully, for they have been known in the past to promote intermarriage."

In the end, it all boils down to the same issue, the urgent need to educate ourselves about our Jewishness, to know the why's of the what's and to thereby provide our children with reason not to intermarry by raising them as conscious Torah Jews, not token ethnic Hebrews. Proper communication with children in danger of intermarrying requires patience, diplomacy, understanding, and, most difficult of all, admission of our own guilt, the honesty of which will touch the children with greater potency than rebuke. But, once again, the best advice for parents in such situations is to consult someone who is qualified to help before taking any action. The most powerful tools of communication, when all else has failed, is example.

And example is what parenting is supposed to be all about anyhow, even after the kids have left home.

Again, do not dismiss the situation with "it will surely pass," for the only thing that may pass is precious time, time which could have been used to uproot a potential relationship but will now further reinforce it. Time is crucial. Sometimes it may even happen to the best of us in spite of all the right things we may have done. But remember, we are not here to achieve, but to try to do our best within the limitations of our circumstances.

KEEPING KOSHER

Macrobiotic Foods: Pareve From Japan

by Rabbi Bernard Levy

A few years ago I wrote an article about my trip to Japan to view at first hand and inspect the manufacturing of many macrobiotic foods. I made this trip again just a few months ago. This time the trip was made for Eden Foods of Clinton, Michigan. Arrangements were made for me to meet Mr. Yuko Okada of Muso Co. in Osaka, Japan. Muso Co. is the exporter who supplies Eden Foods with all their products.

The Muso Co. was established in Osaka approximately twenty five years ago. The family who owns this company is dedicated to making known and promulgating the macrobiotic philosophy and promoting the sales of these foods among the general public. They sincerely believe that this is the healthiest diet available today. It not only keeps you free from diseases but it can also help those who have been afflicted with sicknesses back to well being. They have helped to develop many natural and health giving products.

I made my headquarters in a hotel near the Muso offices in Osaka and every day for one week Mr. Okada and I visited plants all over Japan. We traveled by train and plane as far as the southernmost part of Japan.

One of the newest products that Eden now distributes in the United States, that is manufactured in Japan, is Eden Soymilk plain and carob flavored. The ingredients are plain-whole soybeans, pearl barley and kombu (sea vegetable).

The carob flavored products contain carob-whole soybeans, pearl barley, barley, carob, kombu and barley malt. There are several soymilk products in the market but this product is unique in its taste, aroma and wholesome ingredients. It contains no sugar, salt or preservatives, colorings or chemicals.

Muso claims that it can be enjoyed in place of a meal due to its complete nutritional content. It is a food that is high in protein and iron. It is especially good for people who are allergic or those who suffer stomach discomfort from cow's milk, and is recommended for babies as a substitute for breast feeding. Nothing of course surpasses mother's milk for young children. Eden soymilk is Kosher and Pareve. The label bears our ® seal of Kashruth.

Cooked Brown Rice is a new tantalizing tidbit from Japan now being distributed by Eden Foods. This tasty dish will soon carry the ® seal. As packaged it offers a convenient and simple way to enjoy cooked rich brown rice. You merely place the bag in boiling water for ten minutes. Sprinkle some sesame salt on the cooked rice and serve. This product is also available with vegetables. The rice is not refined so that none of the natural nutrients are removed.

Their pharmaceutical plant was an eye-opener. Here every precaution has been taken to assure that there would be no contamination. We had to wear special boots, white coats and masks when going through this exciting facility.

George Ohsawa, founder of the Macrobiotics movement, spent much of his life studying classical texts of oriental medicine, including the traditional herbal medicines of China. From his hard and long years of work on herbal medicines an original beverage was produced by him.

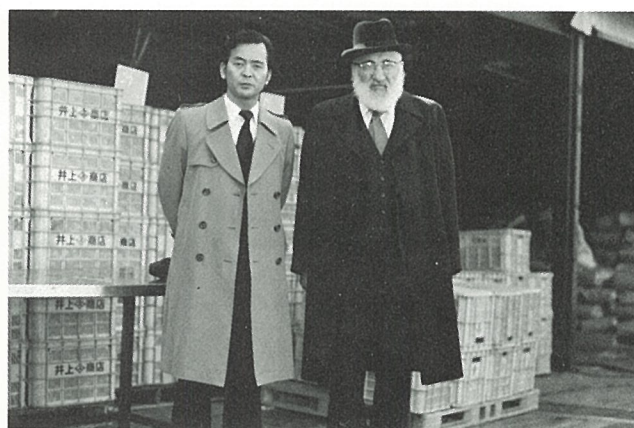

"Mu" means uniqueness. Mu tea is certainly unique both in composition and flavor. In view of the Yin and Yang Theory, Mu Tea possesses a reasonable balance of the yin and the yang. Many kinds of herbs become more efficacious when combined in a complex mixture with other herbs. They also produce a certain essence which would not be present in any one of the herbs alone. For example, ginseng, one of the ingredients in Mu tea, is one of the most reputed and precious Chinese herbs; however, the efficacy of Mu Tea becomes stronger than that of ginseng alone.

As Mu Tea is packed into a tea bag, it can easily be prepared for quick and easy enjoyment. For a mild flavor, simmer one tea bag for about ten minutes in a medium-sized kettle. For a stronger-tasting tea, continue to simmer until half of the original liquid has evaporated.

Muso supplies two types of Mu tea: MU TEA NO. 9 and MU TEA NO. 16. Mu Tea No. 9 contains herbaceous peony root, Japanese parsley root, hoelen, cinnamon, licorice, peach kernels, ginger root, Japanese ginseng and rehmannia.

Mu Tea No. 16 contains, in addition to the above mentioned ingredients, mandarin orange peel, cnicus, atractylis, cypress, cloves, moutan and coptis.

Another new Eden product is Plumball. Plumball is avidly received by health-conscious Westerners today. Plumballs are easy to swallow quarter gram balls and consist of 50% Plum Concentrate and 50% jinenjo powder (yam discorea), a traditional herb. Jinenjo Powder is a digestive aid, beneficial to kidneys and liver.

Plumball's high concentration of organic acids and minerals gives more than just food value; what we have is a super-tonic, easy-to-take, and good tasting health food. Although Plumball is high in organic citric acid and is an exceptionally good quality yin food, it is "the king of alkaline food." Three factors contribute to its strong alkaline nature. First, in the digestion of citric acid in the intestines, this acid combines readily with the mineral content of other food present, creating an easy to absorb mineral salt. The ume plum allows the body to store up alkaline contents (i.e. minerals: iron, calcium, magnesium, potassium, etc.) Secondly, citric acid breaks down lactic acid in our blood that causes fatigue and stress. Thirdly, because high amounts of alkaline minerals contained in Plumballs are digested in the presence of citric acid, their absorption is insured.

Plumballs speed up recovery from fatigue, as well as help retard aging. They neutralize excess acid and maintain proper pH balance. Regular use of Plumballs even relieves pregnant women of the common "morning sickness" problem. Furthermore, Plumballs are unusual in that they have a bowel-adjusting effect that is efficacious in cases of diarrhea and constipation.

It goes without saying that I also revisited the plants that produce foods that I have previously written about: Shoyu, Tamari, Kuzu, Miso, Japanese Tea, Soba (Buckwheat Noodle), Udon Noodle, Brown Rice Crackers and Malt Syrup and Candy. These are all Kosher, certified and Pareve.

I hope to return shortly to Japan and finish my inspection of many other Japanese products currently being sold by Eden Foods so that we may certify many other macrobiotic products.

Other plants in Japan, Taiwan, Malaysia and the Philippines were also visited. I hope to write about the rest of the trip in my next article, Please G-d.

WHAT EVERY JEW SHOULD REMEMBER THE SABBATH TO KEEP KNOW IT HOLY!

by Rabbi Yechezkel Abramsky

1. For the proper observance of the Sabbath as ordained by our Holy Torah, the Jew must plan his business activities, as well as his work at home during the six working days of the week, in such a manner as to ensure the welcome reception of the Sabbath at its proper time. One who does not bear the Sabbath in mind during the course of the week but begins to think of it only at the approach of the sacred day, exposes himself to risks of involuntarily becoming involved in an infringement or desecration of the Sabbath. THE JEW MUST TRAIN HIMSELF TO BE SABBATH-MINDED even during the working days of the week. This will explain why when the special psalm for each day is recited it is introduced by the words "To-day is the first day towards the Shabbat"... "To-day is the second day towards the Shabbat"... and so on. This is intended to direct our thoughts and actions towards the Sabbath even from the beginning of the week.

2. Though a person might give only little thought to the Sabbath most of the week, FRIDAY, however, demands special and thoughtful consideration by the worker, the merchant, the housewife and every other Jew, that they should cease work sometimes in order to make the necessary preparations for the Sabbath. Especially must this be the case during the short winter days when Sabbath commences very early. For this reason, also, FRIDAY is referred to as EREV SHABBAT, the eve of the Sabbath, as a reminder to the Jew: "BE PREPARED, THE SABBATH COMETH."

3. Persons who work at home should cease work on Friday earlier than the time for the kindling of the Sabbath lights, in order to be able to attend to their personal preparations, such as washing and dressing suitably before the Sabbath begins. In the case of those whose employment or business is some distance from their residence, a longer period should be allowed for travelling. The housewife too, should see that her housework is completed and her personal requirements attended to before the commencement of the Sabbath.

Formerly, the approach of the Sabbath was announced by the sounding of the Shofar: the beadle of the Synagogue would sound a bugle-call, as a signal that work was to cease. In some communities, after the trumpet call had been sounded, the Rabbi of the town himself would go round and make certain that shops were closed. As conditions in this country do not permit such practice, every person, after considering the time he requires for Sabbath preparations, must calculate by what time his most urgent work can be finished, before the incidence of the Sabbath hour.

4. The time for kindling the Sabbath lights can be ascertained from Jewish calendars, and Jewish papers. (Also the time of the termination of the Sabbath.)

5. It is a Mitzvah (a religious duty), to don better apparel in honour of the Sabbath, so as to be dressed suitably when receiving the Sabbath just as a bridegroom meeting his bride, so picturesquely described in the Prayer Book, in the poem "Lechah Dodi" ("Oh come, my friend, to meet the bride") by "Solomon Halevi" Alkabetz.

6. Before the time for kindling the Sabbath lights every person should clear his pockets, as otherwise he is liable to forget and carry something out of doors after the Sabbath has already commenced.

7. The Jewish home, brightened by the festive Sabbath lights, assumes an atmosphere of perfect, peaceful rest and joy. From the time of kindling the Sabbath lights to the termination of the sacred Sabbath (at nightfall on the following day), work is prohibited. The acts prohibited are enumerated in the Misnah (Shabbat VII,2) under 39 headings—all derived from the Torah. The following are a few of the main categories or types:—Any process of ploughing, sowing, reaping, threshing and various derivative forms of gardening (e.g. picking fruits or watering flowers), baking, cooking, sewing, knitting, tying permanent knots, plaiting, writing (or tracing), kindling of light or fire, tearing, cutting of hair, shaving, carrying things abroad, etc.

8. On the Sabbath day it is prohibited to discuss or plan any business preparations. Riding is forbidden. Playing musical instruments is not allowed. One should not handle or touch articles which may not be used on the Sabbath, e.g. pen, pencil, needles, matches, money, etc.

9. Sabbath is a day to be devoted to spiritual edification and not to be a day of idleness. One should seek to invest oneself with a spirit of holiness; read works on Judaism, so as to know how to cultivate a Jewish way of life in purity and holiness and in conformity with the precepts of our Faith. This regular devotional reading and contemplation has an uplifting effect throughout the whole week, in business, at work and at home. Attendance at Synagogue, listening to discourses by the Rabbis and religious study form a concerted effort in the same direction. The Sabbath ought to be utilized by parents for examining children in their religious studies, and planning for their future spiritual welfare. Part of the day should be spent with the family in an atmosphere of homely happiness, with due expressions of gratitude for the G-dly gift of the Sabbath-day, and the sacred traditions which have sustained our people throughout the centuries as a people of outstanding courage, conviction and ability.

10. This spirit of joy—of refined pleasure and peace which animates the Jew on the Sabbath day, and banishes care, anxiety and sorrow, should abide and extend beyond the termination of the Sabbath; for the SABBATH is HOLY, from the beginning until the end of the day, and from the beginning of Creation to the end of Time.

Words to the Wise

the better; or praising someone to his enemies, which will result in their speaking ill of him in answer.

All this refers to the truth; anyone that repeats false tales bears a far greater burden of guilt.

FAITH AND INTELLECT

The wisest of all men, King Solomon, said: "G-d made man straight, but they sought many accounts." Man often confuses himself with delving, unnecessarily, into inquiries and accounts of matters of religion which should be taken for granted and which do not really present any problems. In fact, the more intellectual a person is, the more he is inclined to seek "accounts" and, consequently, the more apt he is to get confused.

This brings to mind an amusing incident that involved a professor of medicine. He was once learning anatomy—particularly the anatomy of the leg, describing the hundreds of muscles which are so perfectly coordinated in the motion of the leg during walking. He became so engrossed in the details (all the more so being a man of great intellect) that momentarily he found his walking difficult and quite complicated as he began to analyze the working of each muscle and joint!

The Day Is Short The Work Is Much

A human calls upon only a fraction of his full capacity to achieve during his lifetime. The Jew calls upon a larger fraction and is credited with achieving a bit more than the average. But the Jew can accomplish even more than he does. He must, because it is ingrained within him to excel. More sweat, more heart, more love. The day is short and the work is much. But for all of us to deserve our label, it is necessary to keep always in mind that there is a need for a special Jewish excellence . . . that we may be entitled to the name to which being in the image of the Almighty qualifies us, and we may establish the roadmarks, in capitals, for our young and old to follow.
