The Laws of Pesach

Bedikat Chametz

1. Getting the home ready for Pesach is a process that starts long before the holiday. It includes removing chometz products and dishes, and a thorough cleaning of the house. This is climaxed on the evening before Erev Pesach, April 5, when we conduct the final Search for Chometz. The Search must be conducted right after night falls, and there should be no eating or working that might distract us, for a half hour before dark.

2. We take a single paraffin candle, a wooden spoon, and a feather, and some receptacle to hold the chometz that we may find in our search; it may be a bag, box, or a piece of cloth. Ten pieces of bread are placed throughout the house, and we recite the bracha:

Blessed art Thou, O Lord, our G-d, King of the Universe, who has sanctified us by His commandments and commanded us to remove the chometz.

With the candle lit, we carefully search every room, and whatever area of the house that may have in it any chometz, such as the basement, attic, the family car, and the garage. Pockets in clothing should also be checked—especially the children's. There must be no talking to distract us during the search. Whatever chometz we find should be pushed with the feather into the receptacle, and when the Search is over, we renounce ownership of any chometz we may have overlooked, by reciting the Kol Chamira formula from a Siddur, or saying the following:

Whatever manner of chometz that is still in my possession, which I have not found or removed from my domain, is hereby declared to be as dust and ownerless.

Everything used in the Search, plus the chometz found, should then be securely bound up, and put aside for burning in the morning. Food intended to be eaten in the morning, should also be carefully put aside. The Search should also be conducted in a place of business to be certain no chometz remains.

On Erev Pesach morning we burn the chometz which has not been sold no later than 10:30 a.m. and we repeat the Kol Chamira. The Kol Chamira—whatever language is used—must be a conscious declaration in order to be valid. If you are not going to be home on Erev Pesach, make the Search for Chometz, the evening before you leave without reciting the blessing.

What May and May Not Remain in the Home

No actual chometz, or food containing chometz, may be in the home from Erev Pesach until the end of the Yom Tov. Vessels which have not been kashered (see the laws of kashering, below) should be thoroughly cleansed of any trace of chometz, and put aside in an inaccessible place. If possible, all chometz utensils, and other items which are included in the Sale of Chometz, should be stored in a locked room, and the key put out of reach.

The prohibition against chometz on Pesach is two-fold: we are forbidden to eat chometz; we are forbidden to have chometz in our possession.

Since there would be hardship involved in disposing of our chometz, the law permits us to sell it to a non-Jew for the entire period of Pesach. Since this is an actual legal transfer of ownership, it must be arranged with meticulous care, and it is best to delegate your local Orthodox Rabbi to do this on your behalf. If this sale is not arranged, or if it is not understood to be an actual legal transaction binding on both parties, the chometz remains in your possession and you stand in violation of the prohibition. Because of the severity of this prohibition, the Sages have ruled that any chometz which remains in the possession of a Jew during Pesach, may not be used at all, nor may any Jew derive benefit from it at all.

No Chametz May Be Eaten After 9:23 a.m. on the Morning Before Passover in the N.Y. area

Following the early breakfast meal, the prohibition against eating chometz is in full force throughout the day before Pesach, even for children. Since the Seder takes place that evening we may not eat matzoh during the day, but we may eat foods prepared with matzoh meal until the last quarter of the day. From then on, we may eat no foods, until the Seder; but in cases of need, meat, fish, poultry, or fruits may be eaten. We should bear in mind the need for coming to the Seder table in such a state that we will take special delight in the eating of the matzoh, which is one of the basic mitzvohs of the Seder.

The Laws of Kashering

Wherever possible, special dishes and utensils should be used exclusively for Pesach. Nevertheless, some utensils used round the year may be kashered and then used for Pesach. Use the following procedures: Metal utensils, used directly on the fire for broiling and baking, without liquid added, can only be kashered through "glowing," that is, placing the utensil on a fire until it glows red hot.

If metal, or wooden utensils, are not used directly on the fire, or if they have been used only for cooking or boiling food, they may be kashered by ha'golah, as follows:

- * The utensils should not be used for twenty-four hours prior to kashering.
- * Kashering should be completed by noon, Erev Pesach.
- * The utensils should first be thoroughly scoured and scraped and then completely immersed in a vessel filled with boiling water, and the boiling must con-time as long as the utensil is in the water.

- * If a section of the utensil protrudes so that it is not reached by the boiling water, remove it, and reimmerse it so that the part previously not reached by the water is thoroughly immersed.

- * You may kasher any number of utensils at the same time, by this process, so long as each one is completely surrounded by the boiling water, and not touching the others.
- * After removal from the boiling water, the utensils should be washed in cold water.
- * If a utensil to be kashered has dents, making that part inaccessible to the boiling water, the dents should first be thoroughly scoured, and if this does not get it perfectly clean, the area with the dents should be placed over a flame until they glow red hot.
- * Any vessel may be used for the kashering procedure.

Kashering Glassware

Dishes or utensils made of glass, should first be thoroughly scoured, and may then be kashered by filling and immersing them in water for three days. The water should be changed every twenty-four hours for two successive times. Kashering Pyrex is a complicated problem, and it is best to consult your Rabbi.

Kashering Dentures

Clean your dentures, put them aside for twenty-four hours, and then thoroughly cleanse them with hot water.

Tablecloths

If you use a plastic tablecloth, it must be brand new, since it cannot be boiled as you would ordinary cloths.

Kashering Your Oven

Before Kashering your stove, scrub and scrape clean every part of the oven where food can possibly have reached. Then take a blowtorch (you can rent one for the day) and go over the entire oven with the flame. It is recommended that a specially-fitted metal liner be used in the oven, if you plan to bake for Pesach. The rings around the burners on the gas range should be thoroughly scoured and then glowed on the flame until red hot. If you are unable to make them glow, then the metal sheet used for your range should also cover the rings.

Kitchen Appliances

Kashering such appliances as broilers, food mixers and blenders, dishwashers, and others, entails dismantling of motors and other parts and is therefore not recommended.

Utensils That Cannot Be Kashered

- * Anything that would be damaged by hot water: utensils with handles that are glued on.
- * Earthenware, pottery, or china.
- * Any vessel or utensil that cannot be thoroughly cleansed or scoured, such as grinders, sieves, graters, or long-necked utensils the inside of which cannot be reached with a brush.

- * Receptacles used to hold bread or flour. NONE OF THESE MAY BE KASHERED.

Feeding Children, the Sick, and the Aged

Children should observe all of the laws of Pesach. If a doctor urges the use of chometz for your child, •this must be approved by your local Rabbi. If the Rabbi supports the doctor's opinion, he (the Rabbi) will explain to you how the feeding should be handled. If there is, G-d forbid, danger to the child, then all is permissible. All cereals, dry and cooked, are prohibited on Pesach. If the cereal is especially prepared for Pesach, and bears a hechsher from a well-known Rabbi, then your local Rabbi may sanction its use under special circumstances. Egg matzoh, which is prepared with liquids other than water, should not be used during Pesach, except for the sick or aged, who cannot take regular matzoh. Under no circumstances can anyone fulfill the mitzvah of eating matzoh at the First and Second Seder, by the use of egg matzoh.

Using Milk on Pesach

Since Cholov Yisroel is more widely available today, it should be used round the year, and for Pesach. Where it is not available, Gedolei Yisroel permit the use of regular milk, and therefore, under the guidance of Gedolim, we have arranged to supervise and approve a limited amount of such milk for Pesach. Follow these guidelines:

- * Use Cholov Yisroel for Pesach and the year round.
- * If, for some reason, you do not use Cholov Yisroel, it is best to buy your week's supply of milk with a hechsher on Erev Pesach.
- * Buy your milk from one of the companies listed in our Kosher Food Guide.

General Rules

Do not allow any food into your home for use on Pesach unless it bears a hechsher from a well-known Rabbi. If in doubt check with your local Orthodox Rabbi. If you have any doubts or questions, your local Orthodox Rabbi is eager to advise you. It's better to ask, and to be certain.

If you are not making Pesach at home, and plan to spend the Yom Tov in a hotel, do NOT rely on such slogans as "Kosher for Passover," or "Dietary Laws Observed". There are so many pitfalls in the preparation of food for Pesach, that most hotels must be assumed to be NOT kosher for Pesach, UNLESS you have the assurance of your local Rabbi who knows the owners of the hotel, and can testify to their reliability. Don't take any risks of unwittingly violating the laws against eating chometz on Pesach. Before eating anything outside your own home, take the same stringent precautions that you do in your own home. Make it a KOSHER Pesach, and it will be a HAPPY Yom Tov.

From our family to yours.

Typical Chassidism

It wasn't easy for the smith of Dobromysl, Eliezer Reuben, to get used to the idea of his third son-in-law Rabbi Yitzchak Saul becoming a smith like himself and working together with him in the smithy. He had striven and succeeded to obtain scholars for all three of his daughters, and he had not minded how much it had cost him or how hard he worked in order to realize this ambition of his.

His two older sons-in-law had eventually obtained respected rabbinical posts in Yeshivoth, and left his house now that they could afford to live independently. His third son-in-law, however, was still enjoying his father-in-law's "board and lodgings" until he too would have found a suitable post.

Eliezer Reuben had always felt very proud of his learned sons-in-law, and enjoyed listening to their "learning". It was therefore all the more disappointing to him that this youngest son-in-law should show this peculiar desire to become a workman like himself. It was beyond his comprehension!

He spoke to his wife Deborah about it, as well as to his daughter, Yitzchak's Saul's wife. He received scant sympathy.

"Why should it trouble you?" asked his wife. "Haven't you yourself proved that a workman can also be a decent person? Must one be a Rabbi before one can earn respect?"

Eliezer Reuben saw that he could receive no backing from either his wife or daughter, so had perforce to resign himself to the idea.

On reflection, he decided that Yitzchak Saul was unlike his other two sons-in-law, and in fact unlike most other young men who had as good an education as he had. Whereas the others generally carried their "learning" around with them as if wearing a label marked "scholar," Yitzchak Saul, on the contrary, was exceedingly modest and treated everybody with equal respect and kindly manner, be he a scholar or uneducated.

Thus it came about that Eliezer Reuben often noticed that, when his old neighbor, the strangely uncouth Zebulun Benjamin, came along, Yitzchak Saul would invariably put aside his Gemorro and give him a welcoming smile.

Everybody in Dobromysl regarded Zebulun Benjamin as the ignorantus he was in fact. They therefore believed they were absolutely within their rights in poking fun at him if they felt like it. Even Eliezer Reuben saw nothing wrong in his two older sons-in-laws having a joke at his expense, whenever Zebulun Benjamin called at the smithy.

Zebulun Benjamin was an expert veterinarian, and, in addition, earned his living by skinning the carcasses of animals. Maybe it was because of what people considered his low calling, that no one showed him any attention or interest, other than to have a laugh over his crude appearance or simplicity.

The veterinarian recognized his own appalling ignorance and what an object of contempt he was in the eyes of all his fellow-Jews. It was due to the fact that he could no longer bear to be so ridiculed, that he and his wife and children left the small town in which they lived, and moved to Dobromysl where they were fortunate enough to become friends and neighbors of the good-hearted smith Eliezer Reuben.

Zebulun Benjamin well remembered how he used to be "called to the Torah" but once a year, which was on "Simchath Torah," when he joined the young boys in the "Aliyah" of "Kol Hanearim." He would then hide behind some adult so that he would be as inconspicuous as possible, and when he had to recite the "Berachah," he would repeat it after the others. Of course, all the youngsters thought it very funny and just roared with laughter, and many of the grown-ups, too, who should have had more sense and some regard for the feelings of the unfortunate Jew, joined in the hilarity.

If Zebulun Benjamin had not felt it to be the duty of every Jew to be called to the Torah at least once a year, he simply could not have found enough courage to go through the terrible ordeal of publicly facing the congregation.

But it was not in the Shool alone that people found an opportunity of making fun of poor Zebulun Benjamin. He no sooner entered the "Merchatz" (Baths) than a peal of merriment rippled through the place! The poor fellow literally writhed in discomfort and unhappiness, but he knew of no way to alter matters. He thought that the only course open to him at this stage was to become resigned to his unenviable position.

As has been said, the only exception, thus far, had been Eliezer Reuben the smith. But now, wonder of wonders, a brilliant young man, a Torah-student, was making a friend of him! He could hardly realize the enormity of his good fortune! The more he thought about it, the greater was his appreciation and gratitude to this warm-hearted individual who could make him feel that he, too, was a person of value to the community!

Yitzhak Saul always made a point of showing this poor, much-abused fellow, particular friendliness. He would ask him to sit down and talk to him. He would ask after his family and encourage him to tell him of his problems.

At first the humble Zebulun Benjamin didn't dare say a word to this brilliant young scholar, Yitzhak Saul. But little by little, the latter's gentle manner and obvious interest put him at his ease.

He seemed so grateful that such an educated person should take any interest in him, that the tears rushed to his eyes.

"You cannot imagine what your kindness means to me!" Zebulun Benjamin said. "I really have many problems I should be grateful to discuss with you if you have the time and patience to listen."

"By all means," replied Yitzhak Saul. "I shall be delighted to advise you in whichever way possible."

Zebulun Benjamin continued eagerly: "My oldest daughter is now nearly eighteen years old, and I feel I ought to be looking for a suitable husband for her. I would like a learned son-in-law, for although I am such an ignorant man myself, that has been due to the fact that I have lived all my life amongst non-Jewish uneducated peasants. I never had an opportunity to learn anything which you might include in the term 'education'. That is why I felt I should so like my children to have the benefit of what I missed! My younger boys are also growing up, and I should love them to attend some Yeshivah! But until now, whenever I as much as mentioned it to anyone, they just laughed at me, thinking me unworthy of having educated children."

Rabbi Yitzhak Saul was touched at the pathos in the voice and face of Zebulun Benjamin.

"Don't you give a thought to those people! They are not worth thinking about. You have as much right to hope for educated children as anyone else. You just send them along to me and I'll examine them and tell you if they are of a sufficiently high standard to be admitted to a Yeshivah. If, however, they are not, but I find they have the necessary talent, I shall myself tutor them with the greatest of pleasure until they know enough to begin their studies at a Yeshivah.

"Everything will be alright, don't you worry my friend," Yitzhak Saul concluded, and Zebulun Benjamin's face lit up with pleasure at the warm and kindly words.

"You have saved me from despair!" the latter cried out gratefully. "I shall never forget you as long as I live!"

Yitzhak Saul patted him on the shoulder understandingly.

"And dare I ask you what I can do about my daughter?", asked Zebulun Benjamin hopefully. "I have never dared tell anyone how I yearn to have a learned husband for her! She is a lovely girl in every way. Now is it her fault, poor child, that she has such an ignoramus for a father?"

"And why shouldn't you have a learned son-in-law?" said Yitzhak Saul encouragingly.

"You know," continued the veterinarian in a confidential tone. "I have saved quite a nice dowry for her, with a beautiful trousseau, and sufficient money to provide a complete out-fit of clothing for her prospective husband, too. I assure you, if the right suitor be found for her, he would be short of nothing in my house! I have always envied your father-in-law his good fortune in obtaining such learned sons-in-law, although he himself is not educated. Why then should I not be able to provide my dear daughter with a learned husband too?" Zebulun Benjamin spoke with such yearning in his voice that Yitzhak Saul was very moved.

"I shall find you such a son-in-law," Yitzhak Saul told him confidently, and Zebulun Benjamin jumped for joy, hearing these unexpected words. Yitzhak Saul explained to him that his father Rabbi Nissan lived in Harki, and that he took great delight in finding wives for the excellent young men of his acquaintance. He would, therefore, write to his father without delay, telling him all about Zebulun Benjamin's lovely daughter, and asking him to find a nice young man for her.

"But please tell your father the whole truth about me," said Zebulun Benjamin earnestly. "You had better tell him that I am a very lowly person, earning my livelihood by skinning carcasses and healing sick animals. Tell him that my wife is as ignorant as I am, and her father was a cobbler until, in his old age, he gave up cobbling and became a Shamash in a Shool in Dubrovne. Until I was married I did not even know an 'aleph' from a 'beth', and even now I do not know much more than a little 'Yri' and the essential 'Berachoth!' I still cannot 'daven' sufficiently well to follow the service with all the other congregants, and whenever I am 'called up' to the Torah, my teeth begin to chatter from fright lest, whilst I make the 'Berachah', my tongue should not get all 'tied up'! I know full well that at such a time, people laugh at me behind my back if not openly. But is it my fault that I have been so cursed that I never had the opportunity to study in my childhood, like other Jews? I can honestly say, though, that I have never, since I can remember, told a lie. Nor have I dealt dishonestly either with Jew or non-Jew.

"I have also always impressed upon my children the importance of being honest and decent, and kind to animals, as well as to people.

"In fact I have always acted according to the best of my knowledge and understanding, which I know, by comparison with other people's, is not very high. Still, the truth must be told, even when it is not so pleasant, and so I shall not feel comfortable unless your father knows all there is to know about me and my family, and about our humble origin."

Olom Haaz-Zeh

There is a weakness in this country: people do not want to forfeit their olom ha-zeh; people want olom ha-zeh, also. In previous times it was understood that olom ha-zeh belongs to Eisov. Jews knew they were different—that olom ha-zeh doesn't belong to them.

But in America this is not so. The American atmosphere is one in which people do not want to give up their olom ha-zeh. Ways are found for kashering the olom ha-zeh so that no issurim should be involved, but in all ways the kosher olom ha-zeh is identical to the regular olom ha-zeh, except that the issurim are circumvented.

This is a grave error. We must realize that the whole concept of olom ha-zeh is treif. That a person should be involved in olom ha-zeh (even if no issurim are involved) is treif. The Torah requires of a Jew to have different desires, a desire to raise himself above the shallow existence of the vast majority and not to just live a lowly life of ephemeral desires with issurim removed.

As of late, a wave of concerts has spread itself across the Jewish community.

Some concerts are given as private enterprises, some even for the benefit of Torah institutions, but the result is not that of people going l'sheim Shomayim. Rather the reason for going is the one stated, that people want olom ha-zeh in a kosher form. Going to the theater and similar revolting places, as a form of entertainment, is understood by all to be forbidden. But as to the kosher olom ha-zeh of going to a concert—"Why not?" is the question asked.

Since people look upon this as being kosher, it is considered by some even as being an obligation to go. People do not want to give up their olom ha-zeh. But it has gone too far. It is not a once-in-a-while happening that people attend to enjoy themselves, rather it has become a steady part of Jewish communal life. Much bitul-Torah is a result of these concerts. Besides, the performers and entertainers take on a dimension of being leaders of Jewry. All these things have a very bad influence on the Jewish community.

But the order of things must be—bettering ourselves before we go to work on others. We cannot expect to uproot our entire olom ha-zeh at once. Perhaps we are not even allowed to uproot our olom ha-zeh entirely, for there are good things that must be done using olom ha-zeh.

That is why HaShem created olom ha-zeh—for the good things to be done through it. But what we must realize is that olom ha-zeh is not the goal, it is solely the means. The goal of the ben-Torah must be to become great in Torah. The ben-Torah must also have a desire, the desire of "My soul thirsts for You!" A desire to become great in Torah! This is a kosher desire.

In addition there is also a kosher jealousy—kin'ass sof'rim. If a friend of mine becomes great in Torah, I am permitted to be jealous of him. (Not a jealousy which brings to hatred: If one is jealous of another's wealth, that can lead to hatred.) But this jealousy leads to wisdom. Other than this desire and this jealousy, looking for kosher olom ha-zeh is no good.

A Basic Understanding of Kashruth

by
Hyman Flaks

BAKED GOODS

1. Shortening and Oils

The Kosher consumer should be aware that when the word "shortening" appears on a label, it is indicative of a fat of an animal origin and the product is non-kosher.

The terms "vegetable shortening" and "pure vegetable shortening" are misleading and should never be accepted as a Kashruth guarantee. Shortening labeled "pure vegetable" or "vegetable" is not necessarily made entirely of vegetable components. In the manufacturing process, a high percentage of fatty acid emulsifiers (mono- and di-glycerides) must be blended together with various oils in order to give the shortening its specific quality. These emulsifiers need not be of vegetable origin for the product to be labeled "pure shortening". Many of the fatty acid emulsifiers in use today are of animal origin.

In addition, many producers of oil and shortening use the same non-Kosher storage tanks and the same processing equipment for both animal and vegetable products. An end product may be labeled "pure" vegetable shortening" by Government standards, even though considerable amounts of animal fat residue have been absorbed into the vegetable product. For this reason, all oils and shortenings (used either privately or commercially) must be under effective kashruth control and certified kosher.

2. Emulsifiers

These are widely used in the preparation of baked goods and many food products. The consumer may also find them listed as Mono- and Di-glycerides, Polysorbates, Monostearates, Tween and Span. These emulsifiers are processed from fats, both animal and vegetable. Unless Kosher supervised and certified, these may not be considered Kosher.

*Frozen vegetables are blanched before they are frozen. The blancher may be used for non kosher products, therefore, care must be taken that only vegetables are frozen. Fruits are not blanched.

The special qualities of these products which act as surfactants, making oil and water soluble, make them invaluable basic components in many food items, such as margarine, shortenings, cream fillings and toppings, coffee creamers, whiteners, prepared cake mixes, donuts and puddings. It must be emphasized that ice cream, frozen desserts, instant mashed potatoes, peanut butter, snack-pack foods, and many breakfast cereals also contain di-glycerides and require Kashruth certification.

A product whose ingredients list "emulsifiers" or "emulsifier added" indicates the use of glycerides and requires Kashruth certification. Many chocolates and candies contain such glyceride emulsifier. Lecithin, another type of emulsifier used in chocolate products, is derived from soya beans or corn and is kosher.

3. Bread, Rolls, Challah and Bagels

These basic household staples present several Kashruth problems and require Kashruth certification.

Many breads are made with oils and shortenings. Basic ingredients of specially prepared dough mixes and dough conditioners are shortenings and di-glycerides. In bakeries, pans and troughs in which the dough is placed to rise, are coated with grease or divider oils which may be non-Kosher. These oils often do not appear on the label; only specially prepared Kosher pan greaser may be used.

4. CAKE, PASTRIES, and DOUGHNUTS

These products should be considered non-Kosher unless certified Kosher. Prepared Puff-Paste, shortenings and sweet dough bases which have an extremely high di-glyceride content and require expert supervision are universally used in the manufacture of these items.

Lard-based shortenings are often used in pie and other crust preparations because of lard's unique flaking quality.

5. Fillings, Cremes and Flavorings

All fillings, cremes and judge bases must be certified Kosher because they may contain fats, emulsifiers and gelatine stabilizers.

No bakery is complete without a full assortment of flavorings. The kashruth of each of these must be verified.

DAIRY PRODUCTS

1. Milk and Cream

A Rabbinic law requires that there be supervision during the milking process to ensure that the source of the milk is from a Kosher animal. Following the opinion of many Rabbinic authorities, it is considered that in the United States, the Department of Agriculture's regulations and controls are sufficiently stringent to ensure that only cow's milk is sold commercially. These Government requirements fulfill the Rabbinical requirement for supervision.

Since we do not have Chalav Yisroel in this community (St. Louis), all milk is considered Kosher. A check has been made for Vitamin A and it is synthetic. Had it been from marine sources, it would have been a problem, since shark livers are the richest source of supply for Vitamin A.

Buttermilk is Kosher if it does not

May the coming Holiday be one of joy and fulfillment for you and your loved ones.

Hunt's Snack Pack is the perfect lunchbox dessert. There are lots of creamy-rich pudding flavors—like chocolate pudding. And delicious fruits—like fruit cup. Each packed in a single-serving size can with a pop open top. Send them off to work, to the Yeshiva or to Hebrew School. Take 'em on a picnic or car trip. Keep 'em handy for anytime noshing. Open 'em and eat 'em anywhere.

HUNT'S SNACK PACK GOES ANYWHERE WITH YOU.

have what is commonly called butterflakes or nuggets. If they do, they pose a problem, for they could be made with non-Kosher ingredients.

All butter is kosher, while it is all colored, the coloring (Annatto) is of vegetable origin.

Sour Cream needs Hashgacha. Some brands use gelatin as a thickener and some use mono- and diglycerides as an emulsifier.

Coffee cream and whipped cream needs Kosher approval as they contain additives. The additives could be mono- and di-glycerides, which could be made either from vegetable or animal fats and/or carageenan, which is Kosher seaweed.

Cottage cheese needs Kosher approval because of the rennet used in the process of coagulation and questionable additives used in the dressing, if the cottage cheese is creamed.

Yogurts—there are two types of yogurts. One, where the fruit is mixed throughout the contents. The other is where the fruit is separated on the bottom. The one that has the fruit mixed throughout, as a rule, contains gelatin as a firming agent. The firming agent is necessary because the acids in the fruit interacting with the enzymes of the yogurt would make it too thin. By separating the fruit and leaving the mixing to the consumer prior to eating it, the yogurt remains firm. The yogurt without gelatin is Kosher; with the gelatin, it is not.

2. Cheese

All cheeses require Kashruth certification, including hard cheeses (Swiss, Cheddar, etc.) and soft cheeses (cottage, farmer, pot and cream cheese). Rennet, processed from the stomachs of unweaned calves, is used in the production of cheese as a curdling and coagulating ingredient, and is also used in the production of sour cream, butter-milk and some varieties of yogurt and yogurt-type desserts. The use of a non-Kosher coagulant renders the product non-Kosher.

Cheese and dairy products made under Kashruth supervision are processed with Kosher approved animal or microbial rennet. Kosher animal rennet is derived from the stomachs of Kosher-slaughtered calves and is specially prepared for use in Kosher cheese production. Microbial rennet is derived solely from vegetable and plant sources and is produced under Kashruth certification.

3. SHERBETS

According to government standards, any product labeled "sherbet" or "fruit sherbet" must contain milk and is not Pareve.

4. FRUIT ICES AND SORBETS

Fruit Ices are Pareve, but must have certification because of the stabilizers, flavors and colors which need Kosher approval.

Sorbet is pulp and juice of the fruit. It needs certification because it is produced in the same ice cream making equipment.

5. MARGARINE

Margarine usually contains glycerides and, therefore, requires Rabbinic certification. Margarine often contains up to 12% dairy ingredients. Unless the margarine is marked Pareve, it should be considered Dairy.

6. Whey

Cheese by-products may be used only when rennet used in the cheese is Kosher. An example is "whey", which requires Kashruth endorsement, as it is derived from the watery part of milk which is separated from the coagulated curds in cheesemaking. Whey is widely used in ice cream, baked goods and many food items containing Dairy ingredients.

7. "NON-DAIRY" PRODUCTS

Consumers are often confused by labels and display signs on food products such as margarine, imitation sour cream, and "non-dairy" or "not a dairy product."

This legend may be stated by law but merely indicates that the product is not a natural dairy food product. It is not evidence that the product is Pareve and that it contains no dairy ingredients. Nor can it be assumed that the product is Kosher, unless authentically certified as Kosher or Kosher-Pareve.

The majority of margarines, imitation sour creams and non-dairy creamers contain some form of milk or milk protein listed either as milk or sodium caseinate. In addition, there are oils, fats, glycerides (polysorbates), and stabilizers, all of which must be produced under proper supervision.

Kosher margarines, "non-dairy" creamers, and imitation sour creams are Pareve only when Pareve certification appears on the label.

NATURAL AND HEALTH FOODS

With the proliferation of natural and health food products in the United States, some clarification is in order as regards to their Kashruth status. It should be noted that many of these products are natural, but nevertheless, non-Kosher. Products containing pure vegetable oils could be problematic as many oil manufacturers produce animal tallow on the same equipment. Natural flavors farm-fresh dairy foods from our own country creameries

...at DAITCH Shopwell

could contain polysorbates, grape derivatives, beaver extracts, etc., all of which are natural but require supervision or are non-Kosher. Even if a product is sold in a natural or health food store, it requires supervision if it contains questionable ingredients.

WINES AND GRAPE PRODUCTS

All grape wines, brandies, or liqueurs containing a wine component must be prepared under strict Orthodox Rabbinic supervision. Once the wine has been cooked, no restrictions are attached to its handling.

Grape jam is often produced from grape pulp and juice and may not be used. Kosher certified grape jam is produced from ground whole grapes and no juice is extracted from or added to the product. This is not a wine product and is permitted.

Grape jelly is produced from grape juice and can be used only when produced from kosher grape juice under proper supervision.

Natural and artificial grape flavors may not be used unless Kosher endorsed. Many grape flavors contain natural grape extracts and are labeled artificial or imitation because other flavoring additives are used in the formula.

CONCLUSION

"Caveat emptor"—let the buyer beware is an old Roman admonition. It was never so timely as it is in our day. Food is defined as a substance, whether raw, semi-processed or processed, intended for human consumption. Therefore, it is important that the human being knows what he consumes.

In his "Meditation" Marcus Aurelius, the Roman Emperor, in 108 B.C.E. said: "Where a man can live, he can also live better." The extension of this philosophy to all people of the world has become a goal of mankind. Activities in food research have been dedicated to this goal. Preparation and production of food has become a science instead of a skill and food additives play a vital role in it. Food processors have, at their disposal, an estimated 10,000 chemicals they can add to what we eat.

Everyone of them must serve one or more of the following purposes, according to the Food Protection Committee of the National Academy of Sciences:

- 1) Improve Nutritional Value.
- 2) Enhance quality or consumer acceptability.
- 3) Improve keeping quality.
- 4) Make the food more readily available.
- 5) Facilitate its preparation.

Contrary to popular belief, adding chemicals to food is not a modern innovation. It began thousands of years ago when salt was added to food for improved taste, or to preserve meat.

By present law, product labels must identify the product in a language the consumer can understand and the ingredients must be declared in order of their predominance.

However, for more than 200 standardized foods—including ice cream, catsup, mayonnaise, pasta products, food flavors, colors and many others—ingredients do not have to be listed.

How does the Kashruth-observant person cope with this maze of chemicals, ingredients and products? How does one know what to buy and what to stay away from? There are a few simple rules. Check every canned, bottled or packaged item for a recognized Kosher insignia. If, in doubt, contact your orthodox rabbi.

M'Lechet Hakodesh: A Sacred Mission

by Rabbi Bernard Levy

"It is from G-d that a man's goings are established."
T'hilim 37.

Man never knows what the Almighty has in store for him when he travels around the world. It's true that my work is a melechet hakodesh, a sacred mission in itself. However, unknown to us, it seems that G-d has other missions for us. Our readers are familiar with the fact that I travel to the Far East to inspect many different plants. Before I start my trip I prepare an itinerary of the factories and locations I have to visit in order to investigate the Kashruth of the plants under our supervision. I try to keep to this itinerary so that I may return home as soon as possible. Sometimes though, my itineraries are changed and I later discover that it was through hashgacha prattis—Divine Providence—and I end up in another city doing things that have no connection with Kashruth.

Before I left for my last trip to the Far East, I was called in by Rabbi Hadakows who is in charge of Secretariat of the Lubavitcher Rebbe Shlita for the purpose of suggesting areas other than Kashruth that I could propagate during my travels. Among other things he discussed Manila in the Philippines where they have recently built a new Kosher Shul and Mikvah. He said that now that the Jews are able to observe Taharas Hamishpacha we have to be concerned with the children that are born that they are properly circumcised and that a Mohel is available and a teacher to give the children a proper Torah chinuch . . . and so on . . . even unto a chevra kadisha—to see that, the dead are properly cared for.

When I came to Manila I was happy and surprised to find that they had hired a new Rabbi who is a Mohel and Shochet and can also teach children. This was accomplished by a wonderful and generous New Yorker who was responsible for donating most of the money for the new Mikvah. His name is Eddie Sitt. He is a Sephar-dic Jew who lives in Brooklyn and owns a factory in Manila. He made it his business to bring in the Rabbi from Eretz Yisroel and pay his salary.

In Manila I met with the Rabbi, he told me that a Jew in Kobe, Japan had phoned to ask him to circumcise his child. Naturally the Mohel agreed. A few days before the Bris, the father cancelled the appointment. Later, the Rabbi discovered that the baby had been circumcised by a Japanese doctor. This of course was not a proper circumcision according to Halacha; it could be rectified by hatofas darn b'ris by an expert Mohel.

When I left Manila I went to Japan to visit plants producing macrobiotic foods. My itinerary called for me to go to Tokyo, but I ended up in Osaka. When I discovered how near Osaka was to Kobe, I made arrangements to spend Shabbos in Kobe.

In my hotel I met several young religious people from the United States, Canada and England who had come to Kobe to purchase pearls. We all stayed on the first floor so that we would not have to walk up too many flights on Shabbos.

Friday night I went to Shul and found that it had no Mechitza—a wall separating the men from the women. There were women there so I didn't daven in the Shul. Later at the hotel we all ate our Shabbos meal together in one room and we shared our food. During the meal I suggested that we daven in our rooms, bigichidus, in the morning and go to Shul afterwards and ask the Gabai to permit me to speak after the davening.

Shabbos morning we came to Shul at the end of the reading of the Torah. The Gabai asked if I wanted an Aliyah and I refused. One of our group approached the Gabai and asked that I be granted permission to speak. I was . . . and I began as follows: "I feel that I owe you an explanation. I am sure you noticed that we came to your shul but didn't participate in the service. Not only didn't I participate in the service but I refused to take an Aliya." I went on to explain the importance of a Mechtiza emphasizing the fact a Shul must be built according to the Halacha in order for it to have the holiness of a synagogue, otherwise it lacks the v'shachanti b'socham—the Divine Presence. "You might think I refused to take the Aliyah because I didn't want to make a contribution." I went on, "Tomorrow please G-d I will leave you a check of $180 and I want you to earmark this contribution towards the building a new Mechtiza in the Shul."

After discussing the Mechtiza I became very emotional about the Bris Milah (circumcision) incident.

As a result, soon after I received word from the Rabbi in Manila that he had been called to Kobe to rectify the circumcision and the following letter from the Jewish community in Kobe:

THE JEWISH COMMUNITY of KANSAI (JAPAN)
Kobe, Japan

November 16, 1984

Dear Rabbi Levy,

It was a great pleasure to have met you . . .

At a general meeting, I have been elected as representative of this small community of Kobe . . . At the first meeting we discussed the matter of Mechtiza; I was given the mission to meet the members from whom we had strong objection . . . We have their agreement. Yesterday I gave the order: it will be a solid nicely built Mechtiza which will remain as long as the Synagogue and the Jewish Community of Kobe exist. The cost will be a little less than $9,000. We do not have the fund(s) to cover such an amount.

I remember your kind words: "I want you to use the cheque," when I told you we did not use it yet because we have objection, also (your) "I shall try to meet the objecting people myself." You will be happy to see the Mechtiza already installed.

I am confident that (y)our friends will extend a helping (hand) to us. Sincere regards from the members of my committee and the Jewish Community of Kobe.

Victor C. Moché

Which only proves that so much can be accomplished if one tries . . . and becomes involved.

In the field of Kashruth there is never a dull moment. There are always new questions of Halacha, new problems and new interpretations by so called reliable supervisors of Kashruth. In the production of cheese for instance, one of the necessary ingredients is rennet. Rennet is used to coagulate the cheese. Until a few years ago, all rennet was derived from vels (stomachs) of an animal. The real Kosher cheeses used vels from Kosher slaughtered animals. — I am not going to discuss why Halachically there is no problem of meat and milk.—After investigating the process of producing the rennet, all Torah scholars have permitted its use if the original vels are taken from Kosher slaughtered animals. Several years ago, two companies, one in Japan the other in Denmark produced a microbial rennet which is an enzyme grown on a Kosher medium. Today most Kosher cheeses use microbial rennet. This microbial rennet is more reasonably priced than rennet made from animal vels. The yield however is much smaller and it doesn't produce as good a flavor in aged cheeses as the rennet coming from animals. At the present a new product is being developed. Bacteria are being separated from the animal vels and will be grown, we hope on Kosher media. I sent a detailed description of the process to Rabbi Dr. Moshe Tendler who is familiar with the techniques and the Halacha. He is the son-in-law of the revered Rabbi Moshe Feinstein Shlita, with whom he always discusses the Halachic aspects. They agree that if the enzyme will be grown on Kosher media this rennet will be acceptable as Kosher.

Natural foods have become very popular. One of the ingredients used in dairy and non dairy products is diacetyl. Diacetyl is one of the essential ingredients in butter flavor. As a matter of fact diacetyl is used in most butter sold in the market. Most flavor houses until recently used a synthetic diacetyl which was pareve beyond a doubt. One of the companies that we certify produces diacetyl also known as starter distillate from milk. This product is considered natural while the pareve diacetyl is considered synthetic. Now that natural foods have become so popular most flavor houses are using the natural diacetyl. The production of this flavor from milk is very complicated and it is questionable if it can really be considered Halachically dairy. Natural starter distillate is not produced from Cholov Yisroel. I plan to have this question reviewed by Rabbi Tendler so that we may know Rabbi Feinstein's decision as to whether this product is actually considered dairy.

Another product used as a flavor in many dairy products is Lipase. Lipase is an enzyme removed from the glands of a tongue. This product is used in milk which in turn is used in milk chocolate. It is also used in flavors such as butter flavors and many other products. Rabbi Feinstein permits its use if produced under certain conditions. The Tshuva (response) is printed in his Sefer. The product is also available synthetically. The FDA has not yet approved this product in the U.S.A. There is really no reason—except bureaucracy—for the Government not to approve it.

Until recently all hard cheeses produced in the Kosher market had a Mashgiach Tmidi, otherwise it was considered Guinas Akkum. No Kosher home would accept hard cheese which did not have permanent supervision. Today offhand supervision is given to hard cheese; a so called sale is made on paper from the non Jew to a Jew so that the cheese should be considered. Guinas Yisrael; or the rennet is purchased by a Jew. No Mashgiach is present at the production of the cheese. Reb Moshe Feinstein Shlita is vehemently opposed to such goings on. But it seems, alas, that there are new young Torah authorities who feel they surpass Reb Moshe Shlita's authority. They are relaxing the rules for awarding Hechsherim . . . to the detriment of kashruth and kavod haTorah.
